

aglimpse: friends to shake up the world of photo sharing and word challenge games.

August 18, 2015 – Seattle, WA - Inquisiment has announced the launch of aglimpse: friends, a new word challenge game that uses photos to deepen friendships, curiosity, and challenge.

Do more with your friends than just text! aglimpse: friends is a fun multiplayer photo-sharing game that lets you break away from everyday life. Prompted by Inquisi the Cat, you'll start your journey of reconnecting and discovery by challenging friends with letter prompts to capture their everyday life in pictures. Developed by Jenn Sandercock, aglimpse: friends is now available on iTunes App Store and Google Play for free (Download at).

Learn more, tease your mind, and re-discover the world around you. Show your friends your city and neighborhood and have your friends do the same! You will never see things in the same way again!

"This game certainly hit all the right buttons. It's sorta like 'Eye Spy' but as a phone game." — Juror, Seattle Indies Expo

"There is something so exciting about playing a game with your friends that feels like a conversation." — Jenn Sandercock, Founder

About

Inquisiment is an indie game development studio based in Seattle with a mission to challenge conventional gameplay mechanics and instead creating games based on curiosity, friendship, and challenge. Founded by Jenn Sandercock, a passionate gaming diva from Australia who was inspired by the idea of cooperative rather than competitive play, Inquisiment's first game, aglimpse: friends, was born.
